Other planes at the field were endangered for some time, but were dragged by firemen and by Mrs. Saunders, manager of the field, from the vicinity of the burning plane before any further damage was done.

The burned plane was a Standard bi-plane, and was the property of Leonard Oldfield of Palo Alto. Damage to the plane amounted to about $500 it is estmated. The damage would have been greater, it is stated, except that the engine had been removed from the plane for repairs and was not damaged.

A few weeks before a grass fire was extinguished by the fire department at the field near the house occupied by Mrs. Saunders. Circumstances conected with both fires have lead to the belief that they may have been incendiary.

Safety

EDITORIAL

WHAT greater responsibility does a community have than the preservation of human life? The Safety First movement has taught us that most accidents are preventable. Carelessness accounts for the destroying of thousands of human lives annually, through accidents that could be reduced to a mnimum if we would all practice the habit of "safety first" in our daily lives.

During the past score of years there has been a rapidly mounting accidental death rate due to the increasing number of motor cars on our streets and highways. It is unfortunate that this great boon to human kind should, through carelessness, be the accidental cause of so much unnecessary pain and grief. The automobile itself cannot be blamed—it is the owners and drivers who must be held accountable. Adherence to the safety first movement would mean a tremendous reduction in the loss of life through automobile accidents. Common sense on the part of the driver would reduce this hazard. A man who takes unnecessary chances, such as trying to beat a train at the crossing, should have his license revoked. If the owner would inspect his car with the care that a railroad engineer checks his locomotive, or an aviator checks his airplane, fewer people would be killed in automobile accidents. Poor lights, faulty brakes or stearing gear, lack of safety devices such as tire chains, horn, etc., may all result in accidents, even with a careful driver, and the remedy for this is frequent inspection and occasional repairs.

Fire is another danger that may be avoided through proper precautions. Matches should be kept out of reach of young children. Inflammable cleaning fluids should never, under any circumstances be used or stored near a fire. Open fires should be screened. Electrical wiring should be properly insulated, and should be occasionally inspected. Gas burners should be turned tightly off when not is use. See that a match is really out before it is thrown away, and also cigarettes and cigars. Carelessness in this respect has caused innumerable fires.

Think of the people you know who have been victims of accidents. Read the papers and make a note of the accidents reported resulting in injuries or death. You say to yourself, 'If she had waited a moment to cross the street, she would be alive today." Or, "if that little cut on his finger had been treated at once his hand would have been saved," or, "That mother should have known better than to have set that pail of hot water on the floor and left the room." That is just it—we should all know better. We should all practice the sensible precauton of "safety first" in little things, as well as big. In this respect, each of us is his brother's keeper. So let us remember that sometimes the least carelessness can cause the biggest disaster, and make up our minds that we will not be responsible for any needless accident.

Residents In Protest Over Street Work

A number of protests were filed with the city council Monday night against the street improvements recently completed by the Peninsula Paving Co. on Broadway and Main street. Monday night was the time set by the board for the hearing in the matter and for the confirmation of the assessments against the proprty to pay the cost of the improvements. The protestants claimed that the sidewalks and curbs in a number of places were cracking and one of the protestants objected to the grade at which the sidewalk in front of his property had been constructed.

Included in the list of protestants were August Fromm, the Redwood Hotel Co., Frank Rosselle, Mrs. Woolf, H. B. Gardiner, the San Mateo County Building and Loan Association and Mrs. Johanna Offerman.

City Engineer C. L. Dimmitt when called upon by the council for a report, stated that he and City Manager Rolison had inspected the work and found in several cases that the sidewalk on Main street, between Webster and Maple streets had cracked and would need correction.

Councilman D. R. Stafford said he was given to understand that the Warrenite patented pavement carried with it a guarantee. Now, he was told, he said, that there is no guarantee. "If this is the case," declared Councilman Stafford, "I for one will hereafter vote against the adoption of this type of pavement for street work and will hold out for bids on open specifications. Many of the property owners are not satisfied with the construction work and feel that they have not gotten any better streets than they had before. I believe the contractors should put up a bond to cover any imperfections that might be found in the work during the next three years."

Following considerable discussion, it was decided on motion of Councilman Stafford and Dusel, to have City Manager Rolison and City Engineer Dimmitt make a complete report on the sidewalk and curb situation and also to take the matter up with the contractors. The protests were ordered filed and the hearing continued for two weeks.

William Jamieson addressed the board Monday night with reference to replacing the intersecting street signs on Broadway and Main streets, that were taken down when the improvement work on these two thoroughfares was started. City Engineer Dimmitt said he thought some plan could be worked out to give the business section of the city street signs that would be more ornamental than the ones formerly in use. The matter was referred to City Manager Rolison and Dimmitt for further investigation.

The request of Dave L. Walter, local realty operator, to replace a large advertising sign on the Sudden Lumber Company's property along El Camino Real was ordered referred to City Manager Rolison for investigation and a report. Walter explaned that the sign had been taken down recently to be repainted, and that when an attempt was made to put it back in place, he was told by Inspector Drathman that a permit would have to be obtained first from the council.

The request of E. Berndsten, owner of Lexington Park subdivision, that a number of lot stakes removed during the street and sewer construction work in the tract, be replaced, was referred to City Manager Rolison, as were also two other requests of Berndtsen, the installation of additional lights on Myrtle street, between Jefferson and James avenues, and for a permit to erect a sign on James avenue and El Camino Real.

Following a report by City Manager Rolison, the board adopted a resolution, on motion of Councilmen McNulty and McCarthy, authorizing Mayor Beeger and City Clerk Price to sign agreement between the city and the Southern Pacific Co., covering the construction of a grade crossing at Broadway and Chestnut street.

On motion of Councilmen Stafford and Thorning, City Attorney Albert Mansfield was instructed to prepare a new ordinance regulating the taxi business in Redwood City.

On the recommendation of City Manager Rolison, the board, on motion of Councilmen McCarthy and Dusel, directed City Attorney Mansfield to draw up a new ordinance covering the levying of assessments and the collection of taxes and penalities on real and personal property. In the new ordinance it is designed to follow the state law and the county practice in fixing the penalties for unpaid taxes.

On motion of Councilman McCarthy, City Tax Collector B. E. Myers was directed to submit a report showing all delinquencies under the 1915 street improvement act for one year, two, three, four and five years, together with all other tax delinquencies.

The Redwood City Exchange Club addressed a communication to the board, enclosing resolutions recently adopted by the service organization urging a municipal airport for Redwood City. Councilman Stafford reported that he expected to have some very interesting news in this respect to report shortly. Action on the recommendation of the Exchange Club was accordingly deferred.

Colma Girl Dying From Knife Wounds

Mystery surrounds the stabbing of Miss Geraldine Silicano, Colma girl, who was attacked Wednesday night while returning to her Colma home from San Francisco. Miss Silicano after alighting from the car at Colma had started to her home, according to disconnected whispered statements made by her as she lay yesterday in a dying condition at a hospital, when she was accosted by a man standing by a car on a dark corner. The man asked her to ride with him, she said, and when she refused, drew a knife and stabbed her.

The girl staggered bleeding into a restaurant, where several patrons were seated. One man picked her from the floor, where she fell unconcious, and took her in his car to the hospital. Here it was found that she was suffering from four wounds in the left shoulder, one in hand a deep cut across the abdomen.

The girl is the daughter of Mrs. Hans Nelson and step-daughter of Hans Nelson, Colma painter. She was employed as a typest for a San Francsco firm. She bore a good reputation, and was not known to have an enemy. The stabbing is though to have been the work of a maniac.

Fire At School Burns Bleachers

A fire which for a time endangered the just completed section of the Sequoia Union High School, almost completely destroyed the grand stand on the school baseball diamond last Friday afternoon. The cause of the fire is still unknown, although it is believed to have been started by careless smokers.

The flames gained rapid headway in the wooden structure and when they reached the tar paper roof of the stand, resulted in a conflagration which from the quantity of the smoke lead many to believe that the boiler room of the school was on fire.

The men of the Redwood City fire department working under the direction of Assistant Chief Al Russel, managed to put out the fire before any damage had been done except to the bleachers, which were badly burned before the flames were noticed.

The loss was entirely covered by insurance.

City Manager E. A. Rolison announced recently that arrangements had been made with the Redwood Harbor Company for dredging and filling thirty acres of municipally owned water frontage for $9500 for the city's deep-water harbor.

W. E. Bunker, county supervisor, of Gustine; D. K. Barnell, president of the board of directors of the Merced Immigration District, from Tuttle, and F. W. Yokum, director, of Merced, have been named as the Merced county representatives to the San Joaquin Valley water committee.

Inclusion of a 4-cent tax levy in the budget to provide funds for relief of Tulare county's irrigation problem, through securing water from the Sacramento river, has been taken under advisement by the Tulare County Board of Supervisors. This action was requested by members of the Tulare County Water Committee. The Water Committee was headed by J. T. Crowe, Tulare; Ben Maddox, Visalia; Earle Houghton, Porterville. Maddox explained that money from the levy would be used for a statistical survey of Tulare county.

How Melvin Ott Grips His Bat

A closeup of the strong hands of Melvin Ott, youthful outfielder of the New York Giants, showing how Mel grips his bat when he goes through his famous natural swing on a pitched ball. Ott is leading both leagues in home runs. His batting average promises to go much higher before the season draws to a close.

Howley Not to Manage Browns Again in 1930

The Globe-Democrat says that Dan Howley, manager of the St. Louis Browns, in third place in the American league pennant chase, will not be back next year. The paper says a squabble between Howley and L. C. McEvoy, vice president of the club, is responsible.

According to Howley, the newspaper says, McEvoy has been giving orders as to what players should be used, and Howley claims Phil Ball, president of the club, is the only one to give orders, and that it was so understood when he signed a three-year contract, which began with the 1927 season.

Ball is said by the paper to take the blame and that McEvoy in ordering player shifts, was merely acting for him.

Limit Number of Ducats for Army-Illinois Game

Anticipating a sell-out of seats for the Illinois-Army football game September 13, the university ticket committee has decided to limit the number of ducats available to individuals.

Paid-up stadium fund subscribers, eligible for one ticket for each $10 given the fund, listed in class A, will not be restricted. Stadium subscribers, who already have used up their quota of tickets under the "one for each $10" plan, will be limited to four tickets each. The latter are listed in class B.

Class C. alumni of the university who are not stadium fund subscribers, will be limited to two tickets each. Of the 67,000 seats in the stadium, 15,000 have been allotted to the Army.

Here is Art Shires, the much talked about White Sox ball player, who, it seems cannot play ball without a good chew.

Large-Fisted Boxer Is Given Big Advantage

In the matter of mitts, Berlin boxing experts have struck a snag.

At the last bout between the German heavyweight, Ernst Roesemann, and the Italian giant, Primo Carnera, for whom gloves of a special size had to be made, it became apparent that the big Italian's opponent was greatly handicapped.

For the larger gloves of Carnera, weighing five ounces, according to the regulations, naturally had less padding than those of the other man, whereby the Italian's blows were made more telling than those of the smaller man with his fists encased in thicker padding.

Indians Like Golf

Seldom does a white man's sport arouse enthusiasm among the Indians, but golf has done it with the Osage tribe.

Joe Mills, a young sub-chief, has set the style for Osage golfers by adopting the white man's trousers and shoes, yet retaining the tribal headdress and colorful blanket.

Rivalry for tribal honors has become keen among full-blooded Osages, who boast several players capable of bettering par.

Must Be Husky

Babe Ruth, the famous lady baseball player, receives an annual salary equal to 500,000 marks. She also has an additional income from other sources. Besides this she receives a vacation lasting a quarter of the year.—German newspaper.

BRITISHERS NOW FAVOR BASEBALL

Feature of Recent Contest Was Latham's Umpiring.

Britishers are beginning to take a perfectly ripping interest in the jolly old game of baseball.

This is the eighth consecutive year that the Anglo-American association has been in operation at the Stamford Bridge grounds near London and the season promises to be a record-breaker, according to information received in a letter from Lonsdale Green, a Chicagoan, visiting in London.

Green writes in particular concerning a game between the Akron (U. S. A.) nine and the London Americans, which was won by the latter by a score of 18 to 17.

A feature of the contest was the umpiring of Arlie Latham, who played with the St. Louis Browns and New York Giants many years ago. Latham must be close to seventy years, but he bossed the contest with the autocratic authority of a Brick Owens.

Despite the fact that Kiracofe, hurler for the Akrons, struck out the first nine men to face him, his team lost. This probably was due to the fact that his support was wabbly, the Akrons committing no less than ten errors.

A glance through the program reveals the fact that although baseball is being played in England the British have invented some entirely new features that should hand the American fans some laughs. The programs are numbered and after the game is started a drawing is held and the lucky numbers pulled from a hat are shown on a billboard back of the outfield. The holders of programs bearing these numbers win prizes furnished by leading London firms.

On one of the program pages is printed a diagram of the diamond showing the position of the players and the dimensions of the field. Below this is an explanation of baseball terms, a few of which were the following:

"Attaboy"—meaning "That's the boy," a general term of encouragement.

"Bonehead"—A stupid player.

"Razz"—To talk sarcastically to a player.

"Solid ivory"—What a fan thinks a stupid player's head is made of.

POULTRY

VITAMINE NEEDED IN CHICK RATION

Liberal Use of Milk Quite Essential for Chickens.

A vitamine required by poultry and hitherto unrecognized, has been discovered by L. C. Norris, G. F. Heuser and H. S. Wilgus, Jr., of the Cornell university agricultural experiment station. This vitamine which is contained in milk is essential for the growth of chicks and for the prevention of a peculiar type of paralysis which may result in incurable deformities.

The discovery was in part accidental and resulted from an attempt to get a chick ration low in calcium and phosphorous, which would be suitable to study the requirements of chicks for these minerals. Casein, a purified milk protein, was used as the main source of protein in the experimental ration. When it was used in place of milk the chick ration was found lacking in this vitamine which prevents paralysis.

The experiment demonstrates that the use of liberal quaitities of milk is essential where chicks or mature birds are confined indoors and are not provided with succulent green feed. To conclude from this experiment that milk should invariably be used in all poultry rations would be unwise, they say, as good chicks have been reared in the past with little or no milk and good winter egg production has also often been obtained with rations which contained no milk. It is probable, therefore, that this unknown factor is present in slight amounts in meat products, cereals and cereal by-products, and in large amounts in succulent leafy green feeds.

Barred Plymouth Rock Favored to Caponize

One of the best breeds of poultry for caponizing is the Barred Rock as the sex can be determined at an early age. The cockerels will be light and the pullets dark and when the chicks are about six weeks old and weigh close to one and a half pounds each, the poultryman can go into his colony houses with a spotlight and collect cockerels as fast as he can pick them up.

In caponizing such breeds as Rhode Island Reds or White Wyandottes, it is more difficult to pick out the male birds at an early age, says a writer in the Michigan Farmer. Considerable accuracy is possible by studying the heads. The male birds soon appear more coarse and have a harsher voice than the pullets. Pullets of any color soon develop what might be called the feminine type of head. It is smaller and more refined than the head of the male bird. The heads, beaks, and even the undeveloped combs on male chicks have a different appearance from pullets.

Some breeders caponize White Leghorn cockerels and make them weigh as much as six pounds but in general the caponizing is confined to the heavier meat breeds like the Barred Plymouth Rock, Jersey Black Giant or Light Brahma.

Various Good Points of the African Goose

The African goose has had at different times several names, among which were China goose, swan goose, Chinese swan, Guinea goose, Spanish goose and others. Its origin is unknown, but it is quite probable that it originated in a cross between the goose we now call the China goose and the Toulouse, and from this cross was perfected until it is now an enlarged kind of a Brown China goose.

The African goose lays better than any of the other larger breeds and it grows to be as large as any other. Specimens that were given the best care have grown to weigh 25 pounds, but the standard weight for a full-grown African goose is 20 pounds. They are very hardy and easy to raise. They are very watchful and know strangers from those whom they see every day. When a stranger comes among them they set up a clamor that notifies every one within hearing that something out of the ordinary has happened.

Plenty Good Features

Poultry houses that are built today are sensible; though they have plenty of fresh air, they have no draughts, though they contain more hens to the square foot, there is no dampness which is so fatal.

Two essentials that can be had for the taking are provided—sunlight and fresh air—and with these there is no reason why we should not have the healthiest race of fowl found on the face of the globe, and as a result an increased production of eggs.

Ventilation Essential

Ventilation is another essential of modern poultry housing. A good ventilation system supplies fresh air in the poultry house without making it subject to sudden temperature changes. Ventilation removes dampness and eliminates foul odors, making the flock healthier and more comfortable. Automatic ventilation systems are now on the market which consist of intake flues in the back of the house and a cupola on the roof to carry out foul air.

Keep pigs on the pasture until four months old or until they are past the period of greatest danger.

Whole oats are an excellent food for ewes, but they should be supplemented with bran or oil meal if the ewes are not getting legume hay.

* * *

Wash sows with soap and water before placing them in cleaned houses. Within two weeks after farrowing, remove sow and pigs directly to a field that has not been used for hogs for at least one year.

SAFETY FIRST!

Ever since the dawn of civilization, mankind has faced dangers. Primitive people were in constant fear of wild beasts. They studied the ways of animals and protected themselves from this danger as best they could.

Today we face not FEWER dangers than our ancestors of thousands of years ago—but MORE. These continually mounting dangers are largely covered by one word—accidents.

The great inventions that have brought joy, happiness and comfort, have also brought a multiplication of dangers. Railroads, automobiles, aeroplanes, gas, electricity, gasoline, firearms—all of these have increased the possibility of accidents.

The only accident that does not carry with it a financial loss or physical injury is the accident that does not happen.

With accidental losses mounting into millions of dollars; and over one hundred thousand lives annually (in spite of the fact that more than one-half of all accidents are preventable), it is time for every man, woman and child to coöperate in reducing accidents.

Inasmuch as we cannot entirely escape from this danger of accidents, it behooves everyone of us to learn how to guard against them. The first principle of citizenship in our town should be SAFETY FIRST.

The primary duty of any community as well as any government is to make its people safe. Police, fire and health protection are three of the most important functions of any civic government. This protection is very limited unless it has the coöperation of every citizen.

Carelessness, neglect and recklessness are the factors that contribute largely to the accidents that continue to occur in the home, store and factory; on the farm and highway. Safety first, universally practiced, would eliminate nearly every accident.

Traffic accidents are the principal danger to safety so far as the community is directly concerned. Nearly one-third of all traffic accidents happen to children under 15 years of age. Safety first, practiced by automobile drivers and pedestrians; safety first, taught to our children in the schools, would greatly reduce traffic accidents.

Fire loss is another great safety hazard. At least sixty per cent of all fires are preventable. Fire not only burns property, it stops business, throws people out of employment. It causes poverty! Inspect your property for fire hazards and eliminate them; make property safe for yourself and others.

Fire insurance, while the only reasonable and complete protection against loss by fire, covers only actual financial loss of the property burned. Regardless of the insurance carried, it is a duty to one's self, and one's neighbors, and to the community, to prevent fire.

Failure to provide proper fireproof storage for your perishable goods, and safe deposit boxes for your valuables, makes for lack of safety. Bank vaults and fireproof storage houses furnish the maximum of safety at a minimum of cost.

Night and day your police and firemen maintain a vigil to keep you and yours safe. But even with their utmost efforts, your coöperation is necessary. A community is disgraced by fatal traffic accidents and by excessive fire loss.

National Safety Week should be 365 days long in our community.

Safety First! CERTAINLY we'll all practice it—and preach it too in

The Fire Whistle

WHENEVER the fire whistle blows some one's possessions are in danger, and some one is learning the value of fire fighting departments and fire prevention.

At this time of the year the burden thrust upon the fire fighters of this and any other city is particularly heavy. Here in Redwood City practically every day represents from three to seven or eight calls upon the fire apparatus. And, be it said to the credit of the department, the loss by fire in spite of the large number of calls is kept at a minimum.

However, even with so efficient a fire department, it behooves every person to show the utmost caution at this time of the year in the use of fire. Grass is dry as tinder; roofs are dry and easily ignited by a spark. Fire, always a menace, is particularly so now, and caution is more necessary.

A black spot on the record of American progress and prosperity is fire waste.

For two years, since the high mark of over a half billion dollars was reached in 1926, losses have declined, an indication that fire prevention work is bearing fruit. Yet we have the greatest per capita loss of any country in the world.

The tragic part of the waste is that at least eighty per cent of all fires are preventable and inexcusable. We sacrifice thousands of lives and millions of dollars in property, merely because of carelessness or ignorance.

Fire prevention organizations, both public and private, have labored untiringly to instruct the people in the menace of fire and the means of prevention. It is a common occurence for losses to greatly decrease during the annual "Fire Prevention Week," only to rise again when the period is past.

Fire is the most hopeless and terrible of all wastes. Property and lives destroyed can never be completely replaced. And the indirect loss, in time and business and employment, is inestimable.

Americans who pride themselves on intelligence and education must further reduce the fire waste. They would do well to glance around their homes, offices and factories and eliminate hazards they are sure to find. Do it now, not after the fire.

Radio's Part in Peace

MODERN inventions and discoveries cause such rapid changes and so many new situations in the world that it takes a man with vision not only to conjecture what may happen in the future but to realize what is actually taking place under the world's very nose today.

M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, is one who has vision for both views. He went into the radio work when radio was new to the public; he has both seen and helped in the increased use of radio; and he perhaps more than most persons realizes the significance of the changes that he has noted. Upon his observations he bases his understanding of what radio is causing to take place in the world and of what it will cause to take place in the future. We quote some of his predictions from an article published by the North American Newspaper Alliance:

"What is in store for the future? Perhaps a universal language will be gradually evolved, whereby the peoples of the earth will be able to understand each other on even terms. It may be English or some other language; but radio furnishes the best way of spreading that language, whatever it may be, over the face of the globe. I have visions of an evening's program the numbers of which are made up from all parts of the world."

How would such a program affect the world? Mr. Aylesworth explains:

"I believe this will help us in attaining a more tolerant and friendly attitude towards the people of the world. We will get accustomed to hearing a Frenchman discussing the difference of policy between France and another nation. We will hear the point of view of the German and the Russian and the Turk. A more tolerant attitude towards other peoples is bound to develop."

With a more tolerant attitude, what result might be expected? Mr. Aylesworth believes:

"Radio will do much to bring about a state of world peace. It will be difficult to hate a nation after one hour of its lovely symphonic music or to denounce as cruel or barbarous a foreign state that has presented us over the radio some of its philosophers and leaders in culture and education. Tie these factors up with the astounding new development, now almost here, of television in natural colors, and the ether will become the messenger through which representatives of every nation, creed, and school of thought can set forth their beliefs in their own way."

That, says Mr. Aylesworth, explains his great interest in broadcasting:

"That is why I'm interested in broadcasting. It enters the home the sick room, the prison. If we live up to our opportunities, the radio, with the world to draw from, should be the mightiest force in existence.

"The old saying, 'The pen is mightier than the sword,' will then be changed to read, 'The spoken word and the singing note are greater than the bullet,' for these can be sent into every home all the world over."

THE BELL SYSTEM IS BUILDING AHEAD OF THE GROWTH OF THE COUNTRY

This is the telephone's job and goal

THE United States is developing a new civilization. The telephone is an indispensable element in it. The Bell System is building ahead of the growth of this civilization. In 1929 the telephone budget for land and buildings is 54 million dollars, with new buildings rising in 200 cities. New equipment for central offices will cost 142 millions; exchange lines 120 millions; toll lines 119 millions.

The Bell System's total expenditure for plant and service improvements this year will be 559 million dollars.

This outlay is required because the telephone is a universal servant of this democracy. Business uses it to create more prosperity. Homes use it for comfort and protection, for keeping friendships alive and enriching life. Its general use enables each personality to extend itself without regard to distance.

The telephone ideal is that anyone, anywhere, shall be able to talk quickly and at reasonable cost with anyone, anywhere else. There is no standing still in the Bell System.

BECAUSE it represents our earnest endeavor to give you more than an average dollar's worth of real value for every dollar invested—we ask you to make a critical inspection of Model 612 before selecting any car in or near its price class.

Lift the hood and see the big 62 horsepower motor with a seven-bearing crankshaft. Not only in the motor, but all through the 612 (which weighs 3,125 pounds, ready for the road) you will find extra size, extra weight, and extra strength. Experience has convinced us that every pound of this greater weight is essential to fine performance, comfort, long life and safety.

The four wheel hydraulic, internal expanding brakes are larger than usual in a car at this price, and fully protected from dirt and water. Service and emergency brakes are entirely separate—to provide the safety to which we believe every motor car buyer is entitled.

Examine the 612, the completeness of its equipment and appointments—then make your own comparisons.

1915 BOND ACT IS BANNED IN CO. STREET WORK

SUPERVISORS GO ON RECORD AGAINST FUTURE USE OF THIS PLAN OF ASSESSMENT.

The San Mateo county supervisors went on record Monday as opposed to accepting any further proceedings for street and other improvements under the improvement act of 1921 and the 1915 bond act. This action was taken following a hearing in the matter of the proposed street, sewer and sidewalk improvements in the Blossom Heath Manor tract at Beresford, the proceedings of which called for both the 1921 improvement act and the 1915 bond act. Distrct Attorney Franklin Swart vigorously opposed accepting the proceedings under the 1915 bond act, claiming that in so doing the county was underwriting the bonds. Swart called attention to the fact that the streets in the North Palo Alto district were improved under this act, with the result that the county is now being called upon to pay off some of the bonds where the property owners failed to meet the assessments levied against their lots.

R. H. Callahan, who is promoting the sale of the lots in Blossom Heath Manor, J. E. Kirkbride, his attorney, R. J. Klassen, deputy county surveyor, who had charge of the engineering work, and Supervisors Rosalie M. Brown and John Poole all argued that the Blossom Heath Manor situation is a different one and that the individual lots are all worth considerably more than the amount of assessment that would be levied against them for the improvements, therefore the county would take no chance under the 1915 act.

The board after three quarters of an hour argument, voted on motion of Supervisor Brown, seconded by Supervisor Poole, to adopt a resolution ordering the improvements in the tract carried out as called for in the 1921 and the 1915 acts, bids being called for on September 3.

Following this action, Supervisor Hickey moved that hereafter the board will not approve any proceedings under the 1915 bond act. Supervisor Francis seconded the motion, which carried by a vote of 4 to 1, Supervisor Brown voting no.

Belmont Sanitary District

A petition calling for the re-organization of the Belmont Sanitary District under the 1923 sanitary act and establishing the boundaries of the district, which are the same as originally determined when the district was organized a few weeks ago under the 1919 act, was adopted by the board, on motion of Supervisor Brown, seconded by Supervsor Francis. The legal proceedings in the matter were presented by Attorney Ernest Wilson of San Mateo. George Roussell and Edwin Halcrow were sworn to testify that they had circulated the petitions and that the signatures thereon were bonafide.

Colma Dance Hall Closed

Acting on the recommendation of District Attorney Franklin Swart and following the complaints of the police department, the board Monday, on motion of Supervisor Hickey, seconded by Supervisor Poole, voted to revoke the soft drink permts granted the owners of the Castle Dance Hall at Colma.

Pescadero Lighting District

Hearing in the petition for the formation of the Pescadero Lighting District was continued for two weeks at the suggestion of Chairman Thompson in order to give the protesting agricultural land owners the opportunity to confer with the representatives of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. with regard to changing the boundaries of the proposed district. District Attorney Swart advised the board that either the boundaries would have to be changed and the agricultural lands excluded or the entire proceedings thrown out.

Godeau Deed Accepted

The board, on motion of Supervisor Francis, seconded by Supervisor Brown, accepted a deed presented by Attorney Lee T. Ross from Julius Godeau and his wife, conveying to the county a 40-foot strip of land for a right of way for the new La Honda Memorial Park road through their property.

Attorney Ross presented a petition of Chas. G. Lambert and others asking for the closing of a small alleyway

Washington.—Even though modern mapmakers have charted almost every scrap of land on the earth, whether large or small, there may still be some uncharted islands in the vast stretches of the Pacific. Successors to Defoe, wishing to write of an unknown island upon which their hero is shipwrecked, might still do so without fear of contradiction if they placed it in the Pacific ocean, slightly south of the equator and about 100 miles south of the Caroline islands. This region is to the north of New Guinea; it is out of the way of steamer tracks and has never been adequately charted.

But, on the whole, Robinson Crusoe would have a difficult time today trying to find an unknown desert island to get wrecked upon. In his time, a little more than 200 years ago, the Pacific ocean was dotted with thousands of unknown, uncharted islands, both verdure-clad and barren.

The profusion of these oceanic oases, especially in the equatorial region, and the fact that they were not placed on any sailing charts, made it an easy matter to pick out a nice, lonely island as remote from the world of men as a corner lot on Mars. Alexander Selkirk, the original Robinson Crusoe, lived on the island of Juan Fernandez, 360 miles west of Valparaiso, for three years without seeing another human being.

The story of the discovery and charting of the Pacific's islands is a fascinating tale, replete with romance and studded with the names of many doughty adventurers. Islands have been discovered, lost, and in some cases rediscovered. The Solomon islands, for instance, were lost for two centuries and then found again. Most interesting, however, are those phantom isles, sighted once or twice by mariners of sailing ships and then never seen again. A great deal of this island hide-and-seek was due to uncertain methods of determining latitude and longitude at sea. The rest was due to the sighting of floating patches of marine life which, at a distance, looked like islands, to submarine earthquake and volcanic action which might push a mass above the surface of the water temporarily, and to the ever-active imaginations of deep-water sailors.

Fifty years ago, more than a thousand tiny phantom isles were reported to freckle the Pacific's 70,000,000 square miles. The United States Hydrographic office, at that time, published a "list of reported dangers in the Pacific ocean." The list, in three volumes, contained over 3,000 reported shoals, reefs, and islands, most of them with the notation, "existence doubtful" or "position doubtful." To day, the majority of these reported dangers, especially the islands, have definitely "disappeared." So have sea serpents and the other chimeras which once did the adrenalin act to adventurous sailors' hearts.

Although possible, it is improbable that other islands may be discovered in the vastness of the Pacific wilderness of waves.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Honey

We say the bee obtains honey from the flowers but this is not really true. Honey is only manufactured by the bee after it has taken from the flower a sugary substance which the flower builds up within itself through sunlight and moisture for its own use and which it can replace only by a slow and complicated process.

Fish Gods Prove Potency

Honolulu.—Ancient "fish gods" of Hawaii still retain their power to aid or hinder fishermen, according to the beliefs of many Hawaiian and Oriental followers of the Waitonic art. Though Hawaii has been for more than one hundred years nominally Christian, any old resident can point out the hidden fish altars and relate that they are still used.

An unbeliever in this ancient magic recently visiting the Kohala coast of Hawaii, where the old customs linger to a greater extent than in many parts of the islands, relates that three schools of akule, a popular food fish, were sighted near the mouth of Kapanaia bay. A fishing "hui" or association from the neighboring port of Kawaihae came with its nets and surrounded a portion of the school. Two men, one a Chinese, the other a Hawaiian, took up a lease on the land through which all vehicles must pass to and from the fishing ground and warned all fish venders that one sack of fish would be levied upon each car going through the gate with fish for sale.

People from all parts of the neighborhood approached the shore with bags for the akule, as the fishermen prepared to bring the fish in. Prospects were for a huge catch. But the old Chinese toll taker looked on with disgust.

"No good," he said. "No can catch. He no give akua some fish."

The fishermen maneuvered until they had a much larger school surrounded, in combination with the first. The people shouted in glee. But suddenly the akule broke loose, left the net and headed for the open sea. No fish were caught.

The fishermen had neglected to lay offerings before the rough stone "akuah," the fish gods of the place.

Shilly-Shallying and Regret

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Mr. Silar Jeffrey, in Thomas Bailey Aldrich's story of "Miss Mehetabel's Son," whenever he can get anyone to listen to him, is constantly recounting what would have happened if he had only married Mehetabel.

"Indeed, I know my life would have been very different now," he used to say. "If I had only married Mehetabel," and so on.

"Why didn't he marry her?" the visitor in the neighborhood inquired of the village hotel keeper.

"Never asked her," was the reply. "Might have married her forty times. She'd have had him quick enough. Seven years, off and on, he kept company with Mehetabel, and then she died. He shilly-shallied."

And so he never had a home, never had a son, and all through life talked about what might have been as many people since his time have done.

Gregory always thought that the town would have a boom one of those days, and if it did the only possible direction it could expand would be toward the south. There was a beautiful tract of land—forty acres or so—lying just at the edge of the village, well situated, well wooded, a perfect place to build if the town should develop. He could have bought it for a small sum and he had the money, but he hesitated to take the risk, he shilly-shallied, and someone else, seeing his opportunity, stepped in, took a chance, and cleared a hundred thousand dollars in no time.

Now Gregory is regretting his hesitation, and telling everyone what he might have been worth today and how different his life would be if only he had not shilly-shallied. The thing had been his almost for the taking.

I saw in the paper last night that Watson who died a week or two ago had left no will. He had meant, I know, to do something worth while for charitable organizations in which he had a real interest, and there were certain intimate friends who had every reason to expect benefit by his death. As it was, his property, which was quite considerable, would go to some remote and distant relatives whom he had never seen and in whom he had little interest.

He had always intended to make a will; he had known that that was the only thing for him to do, but he had shilly-shallied, putting it off from day to day until it was too late. Were he not far beyond the possibility of regret and self-criticism, I am sure that Watson would be telling everyone to what better purposes his wealth might have been put had he not neglected doing the thing which he all the time knew was for him the wise procedure.

I hear people every day regretting as did Jeffrey that he had not married Mehetabel, that they had not taken advantage of this or that opportunity, made this or that investment, or gone into one profession or another. It is useless. Things might not have turned out as they expected. If Jeffrey had married Mehetabel they might not have had a boy.

Mule Boss Shows How and Gets Shown by Gad

Chicago.—The open spaces of Montana sent two products to an Evanston construction job, Albert Downing, superintendent, and Gad, a mule.

Gad had a Fourth of July hangover and refused to work. Downing was summoned.

"Boys, I'll show you how we handle these birds in Montana," he said. Thereupon he smote Gad forcefully with a piece of plank. Gad whirled like a flash. Two hoofs shot out, landing on Mr. Downing's jaw. He was out when the ambulance arrived. The doctors at the hospital marveled that he had any jaw left. They took ten stitches.

Gad was given a day off.

War Veteran in Hard Luck

Belfast, Ireland.—Virtually a man without a country, an American who fought for Britain in the World war is singing in the streets of Belfast, accompanied by his wife, in a desperate effort to keep body and soul together.

He has made two round trips across the Atlantic trying to re-enter the land where he was born. He was turned back at Ellis island, and the emigration officials at Liverpool sent him back to America again because they thought the American authorities had no right to refuse him permission to land.

George Young was born in Rhode Island and has the birth certificate to prove it. At the age of eighteen he decided to see the world. He was in Ireland at the outbreak of the World war and joined the Royal Irish Fusiliers.

During months of fighting in France Young was wounded three times and given the military medal for bravery under fire. He remained in the army until 1923, when he was given an honorable discharge and started to work on a farm near Belfast.

Things went nicely with the soldier of fortune and he received money from his family in America to pay his passage home. He had no difficulty getting aboard ship when he showed his birth certificate. But it was a different story at Ellis island. The emigration officials held that the oath of allegiance to the British flag, taken when he joined the fusiliers, made him an alien, and that he would have to await his turn on a quota passport.

The State department upheld the decision of the Ellis island officials and Young returned to Liverpool. From there he was shipped to New York once more, and back again. He finally reached Belfast, but has been unable to find work.

"To make things worse," Young said, "all my papers, including my birth certificates, were retained by the steamship company and sent to New York in connection with the charge against the company of bringing me to America without a visa. I cannot get a passport until my papers are returned. It seems unfortunate that I cannot return to America, because I fought for Britain. If I finally get a passport, I will have to wait my turn on the quota. In the meantime I suppose I shall have to keep on singing in the streets."

Express Agent Flops as a Terrier Chaser

Harbor Springs, Mich.—A dog was shipped by a veterinary to its owner, Mrs. H. S. Woods, Harbor Springs. It was a clever Irish terrier and pet of the family. The crate arrived marked with Mrs. Woods' own tag. It was her crate but the dog was a stranger who showed fight. He was an airedale and tough.

Investigation developed that the terrier, tiring of the confinement, escaped from the crate at Fort Wayne. The express agent chased him four blocks. In the chase the agent spied the airedale, grabbed him and shipped him to Harbor Springs.

Guards Watch Barber as He Shaves King Zogu

Tirana, Albania.—King's barber has soft job.

A handsome young man is King Zogu's barber, with thick, dark hair, a fashionable tiny mustache and the added "charm of married brows." He is said to have been not only "guaranteed" as a real Fascist by Mussolini, but also personally introduced to King Zogu by him.

Whether or not this is true, Giuseppe Falgari is King Zogu's best-paid servant. He receives, in addition to board and lodging, a "retaining fee" of $175 a month, as well as a daily fee of $4 when he shaves the king. Perhaps this compensates for any loss of dignity Giuseppe may feel when the two armed guards stand by during the shaving. The Albanian king takes no risks and these knights protector of the lather, as one might say, are always on hand for the daily operation.

Billy Wouldn't Stand for Leaving Out Nurse

Mrs. E— had to go to a hospital for treatment and while there her kiddies were in the charge of some one who granted them more than the usual privileges. The new experiences brought a new vocabulary to the youngsters.

When mother returned she told the children of the wonderful nurse who so kindly cared for her, and said: "I want you always to include Miss Blank (the nurse) when you say your evening prayers."

This they did religiously. One night the mother had a prominent clergyman for a guest of the home and he was asked to conduct the family worship.

On rising from their knees, little four-year-old Billy, noticing a serious omission in the service, rushed over to the minister and using his newly acquired words, said: "You! You did not pray for the nurse."

Limit and "Then Some" to Fritz's Withdrawal

William Allen White, when about to sail for Europe, was talking to a reporter about the withdrawal of certain of his charges against Governor Smith.

"Well, anyhow," said Editor White, "my withdrawal wasn't like the famous one that appeared in a Rand newspaper once. This withdrawal ran:

"'I, the undersigned, Fritz Reinhardt, hereby withdraw everything I have said about the innocent Ulrich Bartholdt, calling myself an infamous liar, and striking my mouth with the exclamation, "You mendacious mouth, why do you lie so?" I declare furthermore that I know nothing but good about the angelic character of Ulrich Bartholdt, and I call myself once more an infamous liar of the first class. Rather a Giveaway

"What are the qualifications required to make a successful card player?" asked Mrs. Bowling, casually.

"Well, it's hard to say," replied her husband, thoughtfully. "A man must be cool, calculating, crafty, cunning, and have a touch of meanness in his disposition."

"Oh, John!" exclaimed his wife. "Surely you wouldn't like to play cards with such horrid people!"

"That's all right," the husband answered, proudly. "I nearly always win."

Spoil of Victory

Willie, age six, and Bob, age seven, brothers, each received a new suit from their grandfather, who offered to give a bright new dollar bill to the one who kept his clothes clean the longest.

The boys, alone, were playing near an old well one Sunday, when Bob accidentally slipped into it. Willie ran to the house, gleefully exclaiming:

"Oh, grandpa, I get the dollar! Bob has ruined his new suit."

"How?"

"Why, he fell into the well."

Grandfather, by working frantically, was able to rescue the almost drowned boy by pulling him out by the hair of the head.

As for admiring it, we all have an "Ay!" for beauty.
